

iBuild to Donate 100 Homes for the Homeless

iBuild Building Solutions is responding to the homelessness crisis in Australia by donating 100 prefabricated housing units to eligible non-for-profit organisations over the next five years.

The plan centres on iBuild's commitment to bringing real solutions in breaking the cycle of homelessness in Australia. Full details of the project were announced at the official opening of iBuild's Modular Construction Technology & Innovation Hub on Friday, October 19 at 1pm in Campbellfield, Victoria.

Broadmeadows state MP Frank McGuire, Hume Mayor Geoff Porter, a number of other councillors and business leaders were present at the opening and commended iBuild's great initiatives to assist the homeless.

The Campbellfield facility has started a new chapter in iBuild's growth history, motivating our team to be at the forefront of the construction technology industry - a future growth sector as identified and supported by the Victorian Government. The 5000sq m facility will be creating new jobs in the local community.

Since its inception, iBuild has been committed to providing safe housing solutions for Australia's rough sleepers - the most recent being a project in June this year where six modular, transportable units were erected for the homeless as part of a government initiative.

Quotes attributable to Director Michael Zeng

"Here at iBuild we are extremely proud to be heading such an initiative that we hope will make a difference in the lives of society's most vulnerable people.

"As we know, homelessness is one of the pressing issues of our time which is why iBuild is ready to take action and provide real, practical solutions.

"We are happy to donate our world-renowned affordable Transpack and modular houses for non- for-profit organisations to assemble on suitable land to accommodate rough sleepers."
